LEGAL DISCLAIMER.

It is your responsibility to protect any legal rights you may have with respect to any ideas you present. We encourage you to seek appropriate legal counsel for the purpose of understanding and, if warranted, diligently protecting those rights either by filing an application for patent protection or by taking such other actions as your lawyer may advise.

We will use our business discretion as to how best to proceed with regard to confidentiality. It is our general practice not to make a public disclosure of any patentable invention while we are considering whether to license or purchase that invention. However, by receiving your idea we are not entering any agreement with you or promising any level of compensation or confidentiality whatsoever, regardless of whether a patentable invention may be disclosed. In fact, a full consideration may require us to discuss your idea with potential suppliers, advisors and other third parties that are not necessarily employees of Delta or its affiliates.

While we are committed to respecting the valid legal rights of all persons who are kind enough to share their ideas with us, the number of ideas for which such rights exist is extremely limited. For example, your idea may not be sufficiently developed, novel or unique enough to constitute a patentable invention, you might fail to take the necessary steps to protect your rights, or someone else (including our own employees) might have independently come up with the same idea or a similar idea with an earlier effective priority date than yours. Please understand that we cannot allow the mere submission of an idea to bestow greater legal restrictions on us than would otherwise apply to us or our competitors.

Any documents or items submitted in connection with your disclosure become our property, and we accept no responsibility to return them or forward them on your behalf.

By filling out any information on the Idea Disclosure Statement below, you represent and agree that you have read and understood this disclaimer, and that you assume full responsibility for protecting any legal rights you may have in the information you will disclose.
